

CS100 Media History: Introductory Video

Hello everyone

My name is Peter Genzinger and I'm the Communication Studies subject librarian at the Laurier library.

In this very brief video I'm here to introduce myself and show you 2 quick things that will be helpful to you as you begin to conduct scholarly research for your communication studies assignments.

The first thing I want to let you know is how to get in touch with me.

Start on the library homepage.

That's library.wlu.ca

Click the Research menu item, then select Subject Guides.

On the Subject Guides page, select Communication Studies.

My contact information is listed on the left hand side of the page.

If you have a quick question feel free to e-mail me.

If you have a more in depth question about one of your assignments and you need some help with your research just use the link at the left side of the page to book an appointment with me.

This connects to my work calendar and shows all my availabilities.

Feel free to select a time that's good for you.

If you can let me know what course your question relates to, and any information about your topic, that will be helpful.

I try to respond to these booking requests as quickly as I can.

We're still on the Communication Studies Subject guide.

And this is the second thing I want to briefly mention to you.

On this page we have listed the most relevant databases available to you that you can use to find high quality, scholarly research in Communication Studies.

I've also created four videos on the Course Guide that will show you how to find scholarly, peer-reviewed sources specifically for your assignments in this course.

Thanks for your attention.

If you have any questions please don't hesitate to get in touch with me.

I wish you all the best in your assignments.
